MAGICAL DUNHILL LINKS MOMENTS
WE ALL REMEMBER: PAGES 4-5

TEN YEARS ON FROM TAKE-OFF FOR TYRRELL

Since winning the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship in 2016, his first title as a tour pro, Tyrrell Hatton has spent a decade becoming one of Europe's elite golfers.

He has starred in four Ryder Cups and won eight times on the DP World Tour but still holds the memory of 2016 as a very special moment in his career.

And, with further wins here in 2017 and 2024, Hatton has the chance this week to move alongside five European golfing legends with a fourth title.

Sir Nick Faldo, Seve Ballesteros, Rory McIlroy, Miguel Ángel Jiménez and Bernhard Langer are the only Europeans to have won the same event four times and Hatton said: "If I was fortunate enough to win a fourth Dunhill and be in that sort of company it would be a huge honour."

He will have to beat a strong field to do it, with eight major winners teeing it up, as well as defending champion Bob MacIntyre and another European Ryder Cup hero in England's Tommy Fleetwood.

Brooks Koepka, the five-time major winner, heads up a list of champions that also includes his fellow American Bubba Watson plus Australia's Cameron Smith, Francisco Molinari of Italy, Ireland's Padraig Harrington and the English trio of Justin Rose, Matt Fitzpatrick and Danny Willett.

But Hatton has been the dominant Dunhill force of the past ten years and says the relaxed nature of the pro-am format – with dad Jeff as his partner – helps him.

"Of course, there are big Ryder Cup and Race to Dubai points this week but getting to play here with my dad is really special," said Hatton. "It's a unique experience for us both – he finds it special too."

"For me, though, my favourite Dunhill Links memory has to be 2016 because it was my first win on the DP World Tour, I was 24 and had always dreamed of winning on the European Tour, as it was called then."

BOB BUOYED BY BOND WITH BAND OF DADS

Three Ryder Cup teammates became fathers for the first time in 2026 – including the defending Dunhill Links champion

Bob MacIntyre comes into this year's Championship joking that his immediate schedule mainly involves trying to get his eight-month old son Findlay to sleep at night.

More seriously, MacIntyre knows he needs a good week to reach the DP World Tour's final Race to Dubai events in the Middle East in November. The Scot is currently back in 70th place in qualifying.

It has been a largely frustrating year on the course, but he finished 10th at the recent BMW PGA Championship at Wentworth and 14th, 28th and third, respectively, in his other three most recent starts at the Irish Open, Open Championship and Scottish Open.

MacIntyre has pledged to manage his time better, now that he has become a father, and has been helped by chats with close friends, Ryder Cup teammates and fellow new dads Matt Fitzpatrick and Tyrrell Hatton.

"Yes, life is different," he said. "I've not managed my time well enough in the last three or four months. My life and priorities have completely changed but I still want to be the best golfer I can be. So, I need to start tweaking things to achieve what I want to achieve."

"I speak to Tyrrell and Fitzy quite a bit, about life and things away from golf. So just having something more in common with them now is great."

REDGRAVE AND HARRINGTON ARE THE HISTORY BOYS

BROTHERS ADARE TO DREAM

They are rivals again this week, but Matt and Alex Fitzpatrick's shared ambition for the next 12 months is to both qualify for Europe's 2027 Ryder Cup team.

Matt, 32, is ranked No.4 in the world, he won last week's French Open in Paris, his 11th DP World Tour title, was US Open champion in 2022 and has recently celebrated the arrival of baby son Jack with wife Katherine.

But the past year has seen Alex, 27, rising fast in the game after claiming a maiden DP World Tour victory at the Indian Open in March. Then, in April, he won the Zurich Classic of New Orleans with Matt as his partner, as they became the first pair of brothers to win on the PGA Tour.

Now ranked 57th in the world, Alex, pictured above, was recently invited by Ryder Cup captain Luke Donald to attend a group scouting mission to Adare Manor. He said: "The one thing I would like to do next year more than anything is to get on the Ryder Cup team. And going to Adare was incredible and makes you even hungrier to be on that team."

Matt added: "I'm looking to achieve a lot and winning a PGA Tour event with Alex was pretty special, but to have a chance of winning a Ryder Cup together would be as good as it gets."

First, however, there is this week's business to attend to, with Matt – who won both the individual title and the team event alongside mum Sue in 2023 – this time partnering dad Russell, while Alex is paired with Sue.

If you ask Olympic rowing legend Sir Steve Redgrave what it means to him to have played all 25 Alfred Dunhill Links Championships, he'll tell you the story of when he first met the major-winning golfer Michael Campbell.

"I had just finished competing when I was invited to play back in 2001," said Redgrave, who won gold medals for Great Britain at five successive Olympic Games from 1984 to 2000 and shares the distinction of appearing in every Championship with two-time winner Pádraig Harrington.

"I had never played links golf before so thought I'd better get a practice round in first! I was told there was a tee time available at the Old Course with two people who were called Campbell.

"Thinking they might be a couple of Scots, you can imagine my surprise when I discovered it was Michael Campbell and his dad, who come from New Zealand. But we've stayed friends ever since and really hit it off.

"When Michael won the US Open in 2005, he searched me out for a chat. He wanted to know how I'd managed to stay motivated over my long sporting career. All he had wanted to do in golf was win a major and, having done it, was struggling with motivation.

"That is what the experience of playing in the Dunhill has been for me, the chance to form really good and meaningful friendships with so many people who I didn't know before – with pros like Michael and fellow amateurs like Andrew White, Richard Bevan and Martin Gilbert, who has also done all 25 of these like me."

Meanwhile, Harrington, winner in both 2002 and 2006, says he wouldn't be playing this week if he didn't think he could win a third title at the age of 54. "Every time you put me on a links golf course I feel I have an advantage," said the Irishman.

His record at the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship backs up that claim. In addition to his wins in the Individual Championship, he also won the Team competition in the same years, playing with his regular amateur partner and fellow Irishman JP McManus.

And he proved he has lost none of that competitive edge in July this year, when he won the US Senior Open for the third time in five years, at the Scioto Country Club in Columbus, Ohio.

THOSE MAGIC DUNHILL LINKS

The Birth of a Classic. It's 2001 and the first Alfred Dunhill Links Championship takes place at the Old Course St Andrews, Carnoustie and Kingsbarns. For golfers around the world,

St Andrews, the Home of Golf, is unique, and now the Alfred Dunhill Links has become part of the present day story of golf in this enchanting place.

2023 – When Matt Fitzpatrick's mum Sue decided to partner her son despite a knee injury, she could not have expected the weekend to end as it did: celebrating both a win for Matt and victory in the Team Championship. "You always remember the one that you won with your mum," said Matt. "It doesn't get better than that."

2012 – Michael Phelps, the most decorated Olympian of all time, sank a 159-foot monster putt on the 6th at Kingsbarns – an iconic moment in the event's history: a superstar amateur producing a shot the best golfers in the world would be proud of.

2013 – The team of David Howell and Hugh Grant stayed together for a decade, but Howell described the double act as "a lot of fun, but no good results," until things got serious with a sudden-death win for the English Ryder Cup star at the age of 38.

2005 – Michael Douglas and Colin Montgomerie came up with a Hollywood ending to an Old Course classic: the home hero, fighting challenging conditions with extraordinary shots before winning it all with a birdie putt on the 18th. "It was a joy to behold," said Douglas. "One of the best experiences I've ever had."

2008 – The Championship has produced partnerships that are the stuff of dreams for sports fans – none more so than 19-year-old, Manchester United-loving Rory McIlroy and Sir Bobby Charlton, 50 years his senior and the club’s most iconic player. “Rory is a lovely lad,” said Sir Bobby. “Just at the start of a great career.”

2001 – It was fitting that the first winner of the new-look Championship should be a Scot: Paul Lawrie, Open champion in 1999 at Carnoustie. The decisive, unforgettable moment was his 40-foot winning putt from the Valley of Sin on the final hole.

2018 – The galleries come out to see the best golfers in the world play some of the game’s most beautiful courses – and to see the stars of sport and entertainment in the Team Championship, including Ballon d’Or winning football legend, Ruud Gullit.

2011 – Where else other than the Alfred Dunhill Links can you find a group like this? Pop superstar Huey Lewis, Oscar-nominated actor Andy Garcia and Bon Jovi drummer Tico Torres share a laugh in the autumnal sunshine at St Andrews.

2003 – There have been few moments in the history of this event more emotional than the victory in the Team Championship of Sam and Daniel Torrance. For Sam, who captained Europe’s Ryder Cup team to victory, winning with his son was a unique experience. He said: “Because he’s my son, I’m full of pride and joy.”

2022 – New Zealand’s Ryan Fox dedicated his emotional victory to his late friend Shane Warne, the Australian cricket legend and Fox’s amateur partner before Warne’s death the previous March. Ryan said: “It felt as if he was with me all the way around.”

RUUD'S PRO TIP

Ruud Gullit has revealed the secret to forming a successful partnership at the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship – take the pressure off your pro partner. “They are professionals and they are playing for money, so I try to stay out of the way and also make them feel relaxed,” said the AC Milan and Chelsea legend, who will tee it up in the first round with Charles Howell III. “I am always competitive, but it’s about enjoying myself.”

I CAUGHT GOLF BUG FROM MOVIE ICONS

Michael Peña says he has Hollywood royalty to thank for his golfing obsession. “I did my first movie in 1996, and it starred Jack Lemmon and James Garner, who were very big golfers at the time,” said the American star of Ant-Man and Crash, pictured above left with NBA team owner Ryan Smith. “I only had three scenes, but they kept talking about golf. Jack Lemmon was working on my grip – and I wasn’t even a golfer at that stage! I later found out that he was not a very good golfer, so I struggled a little bit in the beginning!” “I did a movie about five years after that and when I had no scenes, I went to the driving range and caught the bug immediately. And I’ve been a golf junkie ever since.”

FOUR THINGS TO DO TODAY AT CARNOUSTIE

- Recreate Paul Lawrie’s winning putt from 2001 in GOLF+ VR by the 1st tee, then scan the QR code to win a VR headset.
- Look out for the Tartan Golf Buggy (below) beside Links House – snap a photo and share it!
- The Kids Only zone is by the practice green – meet players and get a photo; the first 150 will get a free cap.
- Free mini donuts by Links House for the first 200 fans from 10.30am (at St Andrews try the G/FORE coffee truck from 12.30).

CAPTAIN LUKE CASTS EYE ON CONTENDERS

Luke Donald is looking for a strong showing himself, but says Ryder Cup preparation makes it a win-win week

Luke Donald's off-course commitments may eclipse his on-course ambitions these days, but Europe's Ryder Cup captain admits that teeing it up at the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship will get his competitive juices flowing.

"I haven't played too much this year, but I still love competing," said the Englishman, pictured left with Walker Cup hero Josh Hill – making his professional debut this week – during yesterday's practice round at St Andrews. "I want to stay sharp competitively because I turn 50 in about 14 months, so I'd love to go into the Champions Tour having played some events and have that sharpness.

"I've had a few top tens in this event over the years. The format makes it feel very different to a normal week on Tour.

"I don't necessarily think I have the opportunity to win, but I feel like I can go out there and have a good finish.

"I definitely have more commitments off the golf course these days. After this week, I will go straight to Ireland for the Ryder Cup 'Year to Go' celebration."

Staying competitive also helps Donald maintain a watching brief on contenders for next year's Ryder Cup at Adare Manor, the 100th anniversary of the competition.

"When I play these days, it is for a few different reasons," he said. "One is to keep competitive, but it's good to be around the guys who might be in my team. Communication is such an important part of being Ryder Cup captain and with the qualification period underway, I am keeping an eye on the performances of the Europeans."
